Assistant District Attorney Brothers tried persistently yesterday at the trial of Gaetano Montimagno for killing Michael Gaimari to link the name of Michael Rofrano, Deputy Street Cleaning Commissioner, with Frank Fennimore and Roxy Cornell. These menare now waiting trial for the same murder.

The prosecutor drew from two telephone operators in Rofrano's department that the deputy had given "stopover" orders for calls. These came from men named Moore and Campbell. Joe La Salle, a state's witness, had already testified that Cornell frequently used the former names when speaking over the telephone to-Rofrano.

Mary Dunn, one of the operators, explained Rofrano's orders as instructions to refuse to connect his personal telephone with any one giving these

Meanwhile the defence scored heavily in its effort to clear Montimagno of the murder, producing three witnesses of the shooting, who declared the crime had been committed by another man. Montimagno and a dozen other men were lined up in the prison, said the warden, and Polito was asked to pick out the man he had seen do the shooting. Three times he picked out the wrong man, said the warden, thus throwing doubt on his later identification of Mentimagno in the courtroom. Salvatore Salarito, of 264 Hamilton Avenue, Brooklyn, swore that he had seen Montimagno at 8:3° the morning of the shooting and that he was then

"That is not the man I saw," he declared when Montimagno was asked to stand up before him.

Louis de Mar, an employe of Porcaro and with him at the time of the shooting, said Montimagno was not the man who did the shooting. On cross-examination, however, he admitted the defendant resembled the murderer and that the coat shown him was similar to that of the man who did the shooting.

What lends particular interest to the issuance of the report yesterday was an announcement of a meeting of the executive committee of the Civil Service Forum, of which William B. Ellison is counsel. Mr. Ellison also is legal adviser of four of the larger of the police benevolent associations. It was following his criticism of the Police Commisioner last summer that the police assoof the regular organization of employes must in the end militate against the best interests of the civil service."

The executive committee of the Civil Service Forum, which, according to Mr. Ellison, has a membership of 200,000 of all civil service employes throughout the state, are Frank J. Prial, Joseph J. O'Reilly and Mr. Ellison.

The provisional committee working on the insurance plans are Inspector George Wakefield, Captain Mathew Mc-Koon, Lieutenant H. Washburn, Sergeant H. L. Lobbell, of the Mayor's effice, and Patrolman Theodore V. Hall, the chairman. Through inquiry, the report states, they have learned that the general sentiment is in favor of a single insurance association, entirely separated from all social features and other matters which do not pertain purely to insurance benefits. A tentative plan for amalgamating the police associations was prepared with the assistance of Police Commissioner Woods and submitted to the City Chamberlain, who referred it to the actuary of the pension commission for report. This report stated that it would be impractical to consolidate existing associations as units. Some associations appeared to have more funds than others, but the funds did not indicate their tions as units. Court Orders Gas Man Jailed for Contempt to Testify.

J. Edward Addicks, who is a prisoner in Ludlow Street Jail for contempt of court in failing to appear for supplementary examination on a judgment of $16,000 held by Hiram M. Burton, was yesterday ordered by Justice Donnelly to testify to-day in a similar proceeding in a judgment obtained against him by Charles H. Stanton.

Addicks was sent to jail because he was unable to obtain a bail bond of $18,000. The former Delaware politician and gas man has steadfastly refused to go one the stand and tell anything about his assets, information which his judgment creditors might use to collect their judgments. This refusal is the couse of his present confinement.
